Engage – The B.C. Education Plan

British Columbia's education system is among the world's best. B.C. students are learning well at school and scoring well on international exams. We're proud of what our students achieve – and of the contributions of their families and teachers.

At the same time, we need to build on the strengths of our existing education system and make it more innovative, modernizing it so it becomes flexible and more responsive to students' and families' needs.

We need to make education more relevant to reflect the world students now live in, and the world of the future. One of the keys to do that is to personalize learning by putting students at the centre of learning so they can follow their own interests and passions within the topic matter. Teachers must be supported. And families must be involved.

Our challenge is clear. We need to make sure education in B.C. meets the needs of B.C. families today and in the future, keeping our young people achieving and thriving in a dynamic, rapidly evolving technological world.

This is what the B.C. Education Plan is all about.

Our challenge is to take what's long been a very good education system and make it exceptional, keeping British Columbia at the forefront of the world in education, innovation, creativity and entrepreneurship.

We want students, teachers, parents, all British Columbians to be part of this exciting task of modernizing education in B.C. Together we can do it, putting families first and making sure everyone has the opportunity to get ahead in life.

We want you involved in helping to shape an exciting future. That's why we have created a web site packed with information, videos, graphics and other content to help you get informed and be part of positive change at www.bcedplan.ca
